Alumni Support for the Libraries

Unlike the Law, Medicine, etc. faculties, the Libraries doesn't have alumni in the sense that students graduate with a degree. Yet, the Main and all the branch libraries have served as the second home for thousands upon thousands of students since its first library opened its doors in 1912. With this in mind, we decided that we would ask the 13,000 members of the alumni with whom we have kept in touch to participate in the Stanley Ho Alumni Challenge by making a gift to the Libraries. Dr Ho's pledge was to match his classmates' gifts up to $500 million dollars. The response to our call for support for the Libraries has been wonderful. We have received 568 gifts since we first began mailing letters out to appeal for support.

It is the job of one of our staff, Marina, to open the envelopes and to begin the processing of the gifts. At times like this she smiles a lot as the gifts flow in, but when a gift from Mr To Wai Ping Class of 1979, arrived, she had to count the zeros following the first digit on the cheque multiple times. After making sure her eyes were not deceiving her, she couldn't help but shout with excitement to call all of us in the central office to come enjoy the view.

Soon after, we arranged for a lunch with Mr To in order to better understand what aspect of the library programme he hoped would receive this support. The lunch was also attended by the Vice Chancellor. I love libraries but I must admit I was more than curious why he had chosen to support the Libraries so generously. During lunch and a subsequent tour of the Main and Music libraries I learned about the role the library had played in his life. He said he spent most of the day in the library, meeting friends, and reading. In those days the Student Union Building was located next to the Main Library and so it was easy to go back and forth; eating and studying with friends. At night he lived in Student Union Building where he and others were good friends with "Uncle Fat" (Uncle Fat was the nickname for Mr Lui Kwan Fat) who ran the daily affairs for the Student Union, including writing large Chinese banners in an era when computer production was not available. While there were students officially housed in the hall, nearly uncountable others also moved in each night. The VC asked, how did they take care of their laundry? He responded that clothes dried nicely up on the roof. The Student Union also had a piano and music was his great passion. Listening to all of this made me wonder if students went to class much. He said in his case he didn't find it necessary too often and would simply read books and his friends' notes and then take the tests. Apparently this regimen worked out well and prepared him for his life first as a math and later a music teacher.

I would like to use this space to thank Mr To and all the other alumni who have been so generous in their support of the Libraries. We welcome everyone's gifts to the Libraries. We are using these funds to pay for books, journals, databases, and physical facility improvements that benefit the environment in which our current students study, research, and spend time with their friends. While the Libraries today's students enjoy are quite similar to the ones their parents worked in, many things have changed as well. In addition 2.4 million printed volumes, we now have about half that many e-books, 40,000+ e-journals, hundreds of computers and space to use laptops, and the use of the Student Study Centre in the Main Library 24 hours a day where they can get snacks, hot and cold drinks, and tables for individual and group study - maybe we should add a piano.

Welcome to the Libraries!

Collaboration

Hong Kong 2007

It is an informal meeting of leading library and information industry participants devoted to thinking through and debating the new world order in collection development. This year, the University Libraries was very pleased to have held the Retreats in Hong Kong on 12-14 April 2007 with the theme of "The Quest for Information: Open or Closed, Democratic or Controlled? Perspectives from the Scholarly Community".

The 5th Annual Library Leadership Institute

Following on from the successful Institutes held since 2003, the University of Hong Kong Libraries held the 5th Annual Library Leadership Institute with the theme of "Redefining Libraries: Web 2.0 and Other Challenges for Library Leaders". This year, the Institute was held in Xiamen, with participants from Hong Kong, mainland China, Taiwan, Japan, Korea, Malaysia, Singapore, Thailand, the Philippines and other countries in the region.

2007 Guangdong-JULAC Libraries Cooperation Meeting

It is an annual meeting between directors of academic libraries in Guangdong Province and HKSAR. This year, 14 Guangdong librarians from nine institutions and 19 Hong Kong librarians from eight JULAC libraries attended the Hong Kong meeting on 10 May 2007. They shared their experiences in cooperative projects such as JURA (Joint-Universities Research Archives), HKCAN (Hong Kong Chinese Authority Names Database) and HKALL (Hong Kong Academic Library Link).

Promoting 21st Century Scholarly Communication: The Role of Institutional Repositories in the Open Access Movement

With sponsorship from the Soros foundation and JULAC, the Libraries hosted this conference on 17-18 May.

Open access (OA) and institutional repositories (IR) are transforming scholarly communication and bringing new opportunities and challenges for Hong Kong researchers, librarians, publishers, and research funding bodies. Promoting 21st Century Scholarly Communication presented a conference with international "key players" and Hong Kong authorities to address the wide range of topics surrounding these dynamic movements.

Alumni & Students' Support

Honour Mothers with Books Programme

More than 200 people chose to send gifts to their mothers through The University of Hong Kong Libraries Honour with Books Programme.

With a $200 gift to the Honour with Books programme in this Mother's Day promotion, a commemorative bookplate bearing donor's name and the name of this special person will be placed in a new book in the Libraries' collection. A card with the bookplate will be sent to the honouree or to the family.

They expressed their deepest feelings to mothers in words:

"Thank you for your unconditional love and support since we were born! We love you!" ;

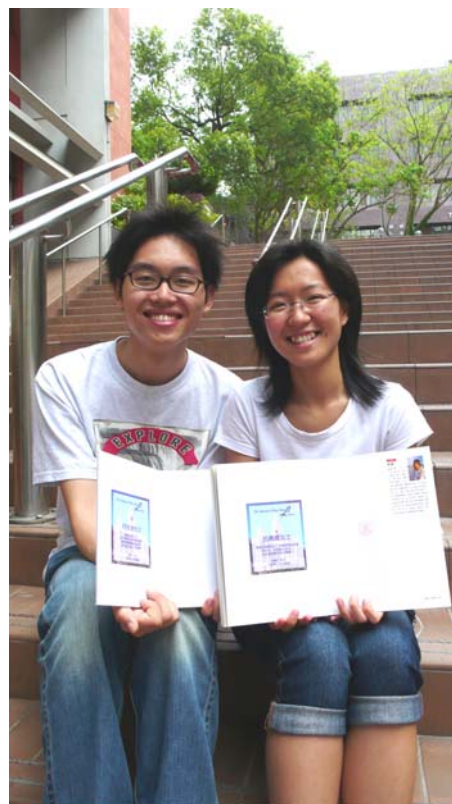

"To my momma for her greatest love of all";

"For her guidance, care and unconditional love";

"Thank you mother!!! Without you, I cannot be so happy in the world. Happy Mother's Day forever.";

"A million and one thanks to a mother who's one in a million! Happy Mother's Day!";

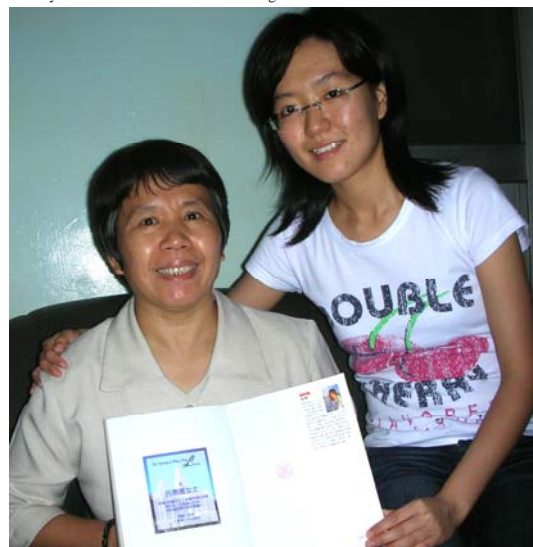

"Mother" – a word that means the world to me."

Bookplates donated by Sandy and Vincent.

One of the donors, a HKU student said, “the bookplate speaks of my deepest love to my dearest mother. She is the best mother in my eyes, and also my most intimate friend. Without her enormous sacrifice, there would not be the present me. There is no greater idea than to dedicate my love for her in HKU’s library forever. For both my parents and I are book-lovers, I am sure that she will be overwhelmed and very happy at receiving the card of the bookplate on Mothers’ Day.”

Sandy and her mother Ms Lui Wai Fung.

Another donor, also a student of HKU Vincent said that his relation with his mother is very close. “Sometimes she has to be on night shift and I always wait for her to come back home before I go to bed. I will chat with her about my school life, her work, almost everything!” Vincent’s mother is always proud of him for being able to study in HKU. She always encourages him to read and learn more, so having a bookplate with her name on it also means a lot to both of them. “I am very sure that she will like this gift as much as I do.”

Mrs Lau received two bookplates from her husband and her four kids. Mr Lau said, “Carmen gave me the greatest gifts on earth – the four kids. She is a great supporter of big family!! She enjoys her role as a mother of four young kids (from 7 years old to 10 months old), and at the same time enjoys the challenge at work.” Mrs Lau always encourages her friends to have more children and she thinks that “Mother” is the most beautiful name for women.

Responses to Users' Questions about Ebooks

Janny Lai

Electronic Resources Acquisitions Coordinator

jklai@hku.hk

Recently a number of users raised some questions about ebooks in an HKU Libraries survey. Since these questions concern issues that might be common among users, we have tried to respond to them below.

'I can't access an ebook. This can't be because there are too many users, can it?'

While it is commonplace for ejournals to allow an unlimited number of users to access the same ejournal at the same time — and users might therefore expect unlimited access to all electronic resources — the situation is not so simple for ebooks.

It is not unusual for ebooks to be sold like printed books, with access restricted to one copy and one user at a time. Restrictions are often set by the publisher as part of an agreement with the ebook provider that runs the platform (e.g. netLibrary, ebrary or Superstar) used to distribute ebooks. Some publishers might require that a minimum number of copies of an ebook be sold if an institution or group of libraries (called a 'consortium') is of a certain size. This enables publishers to protect their revenue while they expand their business into the digital market.

However, some ebook products allow simultaneous access by an unlimited number of users, e.g. ebrary and ENGnetBASE (Cell Press/Taylor and Francis). Often this is because the ebooks are sold as a group, contain a mix of old and new titles, or are paid for on an annual subscription (with the price based on the size of the user population). This allows the ebook provider to have a steady income while still allowing multiple users to access a single ebook. Some ebook providers now charge a certain price for a specific number of uses of an ebook, so many users can access the same ebook at one time as long as the number of uses is within the limit.

HKU Libraries always tries to get the best possible deal for our users when we negotiate with ebook vendors.

'Why can't I download some ebooks?' and 'Why are some ebooks hard to browse and printing is limited, for example, five pages at a time?'

Different publishers set different limits on what users can do with an ebook, and ebook providers enforce these limits. Some platforms allow ebooks to be downloaded as pdf files that can be printed and copied without restrictions (usually because the pricing has factored in the maximum usage of the user population). More often, though, even if downloading is allowed, an ebook cannot be read without the proprietary reader designed by the ebook provider; and users can only view, print or copy one paragraph, one page, one section, or one chapter at a time. Some platforms also track and restrict how many pages can be printed or copied in one session. Some require personal login before viewing to ensure that any prohibited uses and problem users can be tracked down.

We Value Your Views

There has been much discussion between authors, publishers, ebook providers and users as to how to reach a balance between their respective rights. As librarians, we strongly encourage publishers and ebook providers to impose as few restrictions as possible on users, and to allow libraries and end users 'fair use' of the licensed material. On the other hand, users may also want to be reminded that use of any licensed material, including ebooks, is restricted to personal, scholarly and educational purposes, and that users need to respect the rights of copyright holders. Most ebook vendors have Terms and Conditions for end users posted on their sites. More information about copyright in teaching and learning at HKU can also be found at <http://lib.hku.hk/copyright/>.

'Has the loan period for ebooks changed recently?'

For the HKU Libraries, only netLibrary and Apabi allow users to download ebooks for offline viewing in addition to online viewing. The loan period is usually set to one day to encourage faster circulation. However, the loan period might be different if HKU Libraries purchased the ebook together with other libraries and the majority of libraries decided on a different loan period.

'I can't access database X' or 'Access to database X is slow'

It's difficult to say why a user might not be able to access a database at a particular time, or why access might be slow. The best thing to do when one encounters any access problem is to report it to the Libraries' frontline staff. We will investigate and fix the problem.

Happy ebook reading!

Outreach

With committed goal to better serve the local community, the Libraries has partnered with the Hong Kong Central Library (HKCL) to provide research assistance to Hong Kong citizens. Any Hong Kong citizen who has a genuine research need can apply for a 3-day temporary pass to the Libraries via HKCL. HKCL will examine the research topics of the applicants. If no research resources can be identified from the Hong Kong Public Libraries network, a referral to the Libraries will be made. The collaboration will start 30 May 2007.

Government PSDAS funding - CEPA smart eco-design Programme for Manufacturing and Industrial Engineers: enhancement of knowledge of design professionals on eco-design of electronic/engineering products (CDROM).

適合製造及工業工程師的 CEPA Smart eco-Design™ 計劃
提升專業人士對電子/工程產品環保設計的知識

The emergence of the Directive of the European Parliament and of the Council on “Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment” (WEEE), “The Restriction of Hazardous Substances” (RoHS) and “Energy-using Products” (EuP) has significant impact on green manufacturing and eco-design.

To meet the needs of the increasing trend and to encourage manufacturers to design products with the environmental impacts throughout their entire life cycle, the University of Hong Kong (Industrial and Manufacturing Systems Engineering Department) in collaboration with the Hong Kong Productivity Council, implemented the “CEPD Smart eco-Design project” under the funding support from The Professional Services Development Assistance Scheme (PSDAS) of the HKSAR Government.

The project aims to facilitate professionals of related interest on eco-design of electronic/engineering products. It involves organising a 5-day intensive training programme, with invited speakers of three UK specialists, Professor Martin Charter, Dr Martin Goosey and Mr Vic Clements, arranged in 10 independent modules as well as preparation of a training pack in CD-ROM format:

Module 1	Strategic Developments
Module 2	Legislation
Module 3	Eco-Design 1
Module 4	Eco-Design 2
Module 5	Product Services System (PSS)
Module 6	Eco-Innovation
Module 7	Eco-Design Management
Module 8	Green Supply Chain Management and Marketing
Module 9	Materials
Module 10	No-lead Soldering

This valuable product, as a final deliverable of this project with limited production (500 copies of the bi-lingual CD-ROM) is now available at the Libraries.

歐盟的《廢棄電器電子設備指令》(WEEE)、《限制電器電子設備使用某些有害物質指令》(RoHS) 及《為耗能產品訂定環保設計要求的框架指令》(EuP)的實施，代表著綠色電子產品設計及製造將會是世界大趨勢。

為協助業內專才理解上述指令的要求及汲取環保產品設計和「產品壽終」管理的基本知識，香港大學(工業及製造系統工程系)聯同香港生產力促進局在獲得政府「專業服務發展資助計劃」的資助下，推行了「適合製造及工業工程師的 CEPA Smart eco-Design™ 計劃 - 提升專業人士對電子/工程產品環保設計的知識」。我們於 2005 年 6 月 6 日至 10 日邀請了三位來自英國的專家，分別是 Martin Charter 教授，Martin Goosey 博士及 Vic Clements 先生在香港生產力促進局主持五天的培訓課程。培訓課程內容如下：

- 單元 1 策略性發展 - 整體趨勢、可持續消耗和生產、商業可持續性、企業社會責任(CSR)
- 單元 2 法例 - 有關電器電子產品的歐盟指令及日本法例(例如：WEEE、RoHS、EuP、IPP、HARL及LPEUR)、資料來源
- 單元 3 環保設計1 - 環保設計及可持續設計、能源、循環再造、重量/尺碼、物料兼容、個案研究
- 單元 4 環保設計2 - 環保設計工具及技巧、工具箱
